

About the Texas Schoolmarm

I have created this independent web-site to serve both as a resource for my students and a showcase of the technology skills that I am mastering as I strive to integrate technology into my classroom.

I teach English 3, AP Language & Composition, and sponsor The Lions' Roar, the school newspaper, at Brownwood High School.

Originally from New Mexico, I moved to Texas to attend Hardin-Simmons University. I have a BA degree in English from Texas Tech University and am presently working toward a master's degree in Curriculum & Instruction at Angelo State University.

It has been my privilege to work with young people in grades 7-12 for the past 25 years.

Student Authors

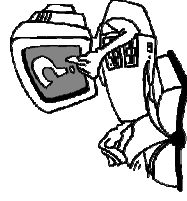

The Student Work section offers students the opportunity to publish their work on the Web.

Work presently appearing on the website includes original student poems, short creative pieces, PowerPoint presentations, and web pages.

Help is only an email away!

Personal messages can be sent in several ways:

- Form submission at bottom of homepage. Once you type your message in the form and submit it, your message will be sent to me immediately. Provide an email address if you need a reply.
- Private messages and emails can also be sent through the discussion forum.

Researching in the Digital Age

The website provides important lessons and practice in digital research. Students learn to be wise researchers who make the effort to evaluate information found on the Internet before accepting it as true. Any web content should be checked for authority, currency, accuracy, objectivity, and coverage before using it as a research source.

Convenient Links to Other Sites

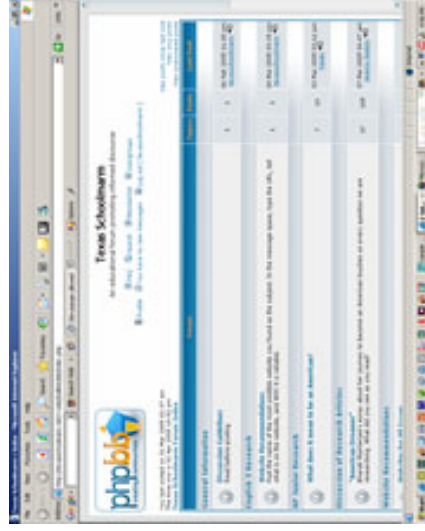

Students can quickly link to many places on the World Wide Web, including news sources, library databases, the College Board's Advanced Placement website, and Brownwood High School's website.

Join an online community of learners

The Texas Schoolmarm Discussion Board is an educational forum promoting informed discourse among students.

Many college students are being required to contribute to online discussions as a part of their courses. Our discussion forum provides an opportunity for high school students to gain skills and practice using this type of communication.

Use the website calendar to stay up to date on assignments and school events.
